Last night was the presentation of the special flights programme by the company that will take passengers into space. Tickets will cost around €150,000, a representative told us.

The company will use a plane called a space liner that is specially designed for the flight. Every passenger will have a spectacular view, he said. They'll have enormous windows and luxurious seats.

The flights will take off from the Mojave Desert near Los Angeles. It will be a three-hour journey, the representative explained. Passengers will have about a week's training before taking off.

The company are very positive about the popularity of these space flights. We think that about 3,000 people will want to do this, the representative said.
